

BIOGRAPHY

James Sporleder, Co-founder, Director

Jim brings some unique subject matter background to the Regulus Media Team. With more than 25 years' experience in security, Jim is nationally known for his expertise in specialized captivity survival. As an active duty officer in the United States Air Force, and later as a DoD Civilian, Jim was responsible for directly training some of the most elite units in the military.

As a leading subject matter expert in crisis support and repatriation of U.S. Servicemen and women, Jim was responsible for planning, preparation, support, and execution of numerous repatriation operations reaching as far back as 1993. He played a direct role in repatriation operations for three U.S. Army soldiers held in Kosovo in 1999, and served as the Repatriation Team Chief, Forward, for the return and debrief of 24 U.S. Navy Crew Members detained in the People's Republic of China in 2001. Jim also served as a principal team member and analyst for an agency-wide Personnel Recovery Needs Assessment for the FBI in 2005.

Jim served as President of the Center for Personal Protection and Safety from 2004 through 2015, where he helped research, develop, and guide implementation of specialized programs helping much of the Fortune 100 plan and prepare for the emerging security challenges related to Workplace Violence. In that time, Jim was the lead developer and project director for more than 15 safety and security, video-based training productions and associated Computer Based Training Programs, addressing some of the most challenging personal safety and security issues facing today's work environment.

Following his passion of developing media-based training, Jim helped to found Regulus Media Inc. in 2016 and has set a systematic production schedule, planning the release of one-to-two high-quality productions per year over the course of the next several years. Regulus Media's GETTING REAL Solutions product suite will continue to tackle some of the most pervasive and challenging topics of the day as related to interpersonal violence awareness, prevention, and response.